Introduction

If you've already watched the crash course video, no problem, but everything might be more clear if you look through this info first and then watch the video — if you can still do it in that order. ;)

The overall steps for giving a Lo Shu reading are:

1. Draw the grid and distribute the birthdate digits into the grid.
2. Look for patterns and multiple digits in the grid.
3. Explain the meanings of the arrow and numbers (the actual reading).

Here's the grid showing where the numbers go when you put the birthdate into the grid (the video explains what I'm talking about):

4	9	2
3	5	7
8	1	6

There are just 8 arrow meanings and 9 number meanings, so a total of only 17 things you'll need to know to give a reading. (Again, the video explains what I mean about arrow meanings.)

See the next two pages for more info...

Arrow Meanings

The arrows have a minus or plus meaning. For example, a minus Thought arrow in the first column means that person is more inclined to just dive into something (spontaneous!) rather than thinking it through, and a positive Thought arrow means that person will typically think things through before diving in.

Using those examples, you can modify the arrow meanings below as needed.

Rows

Top: Head (makes decisions based on logic)

Middle: Heart (makes decisions based on emotion)

Bottom: Action (more active than passive)

Columns

Left: Thought (thinks it through or dives in)

Middle: Will/Passion: (the drive to do something)

Right: Outlook (positive/outward or closed/inward)

Diagonals

Lower-Left to Upper-Right: Willpower (less or more finishing power)

Number Meanings

1. Beginnings
2. Cooperation
3. Expansion
4. Stability
5. Action
6. Communication
7. Spirituality
8. Inspiration
9. Change

On the following page you'll see examples of what you could say for each of the numbers, instead of just saying, "Hey, a 2, you're cooperative!"

Examples of What To Say For Each Number

Don't feel like you should memorize the lines below — they're just examples to get your own creativity flowing.

One: That's the number that signifies beginnings. I know when something needs to get done you're not afraid to jump in and get started. Other people notice and appreciate that about you.

Two: That's the number that signifies cooperation. I know even though you have strong beliefs, your willingness to be open-minded and fair draws people to you.

Three: That's the number that signifies expansion. Even if you don't go looking for new experiences, when they come upon you you're able to take what's good from those and use it for growth.

Four: That's the number that signifies security. I know people can depend on you — you're seen as someone who's solid as a rock to others and they appreciate that.

Five: That's the number that signifies activity. That tells me you are always on the go. At times that may seem overwhelming, but you're at your best when your plate is full.

Six: That's the number that signifies communication. Your desire to understand things comes in handy when the people around you ask for advice. They know they can come to you and you're eager to pass on the knowledge you have.

Seven: That's the number that signifies spirituality. You have a continuous search for knowledge, a desire to find the hidden truths that others may not even know exist.

Eight: That's the number that signifies inspiration. While some people get bored easily, you have the ability to come up with ideas and thoughts that create excitement and happiness in your life.

Nine: That's the number that signifies change. I know while some people get all stressed out with change in their lives, you have ways to cope with that, and even welcome change at times in your life. You don't see change as a bad thing.

Finally

I hope this helps you get started giving your own Lo Shu numerology readings!
